More often than not, the best wines that we discover come from close friends in the wine industry. When Roger Roessler, whom you might know from Black Pine first told us about this Rosé that he was importing from France, his excitement was so contagious that we immediately tasted it. When our panel tried it, we happened to have nearly a dozen other Rosés, most of which were from Provence, and Chateau des Garcinieres was the unanimous favorite. It seems like Roger found a wine that has bottled excitement and intermixed it with vivid coastal breeze, bright, sun-drenched acidity, warm red fruits and soft, delicate flavors. At $23/btl the quality is unrivaled.

Provence is a region in Southeastern France which is perfectly suited for producing profound Rosé wines. Chateau des Garcinieres has been family owned and operated since 1898 and their family has been caring for the grapes for four generations. Their 2017 Rosé combines Grenache, Cinsaut and Rolle varietals and on the palate the balance of warm Orchard fruits, bright acidity and delicate sea-like nuances bring a smile to my face every time I taste it.
